

Calling all South Asian Voices!

Do you have a story to share about abuse and survival?
Interested in speaking out against violence?

Chaya invites South Asian survivors, victims, and their families and friends to participate in a creative community forum to share experiences related to all forms of violence (i.e. structural, inter-personal, physical, sexual, emotional, child abuse...).

Share your expressions in any form (writing, painting, storytelling, poetry, photography, dance, etc.) during Community Speaks, during Tasveer's Aaina Women's Festival on March 29th, 2008. All ages and genders welcome! We encourage South Asians of diverse political, religious, cultural, and sexual orientations to participate.

Questions? Interested and want to get involved?

Contact community advocates, Neena and Nitika, at 206-568-7576 or via email at:
nitika@chayaseattle.org or neena@chayaseattle.org.

Last day to RSVP to participate is Friday, March 15th, 2008.

No previous artistic experience required!
